Changing Places: A Tale of Two Campuses: David Lodge ...

Changing Places is the first of David Lodge's "Campus" series, this one being set in 1969 and published in 1975. The sexual revolution, Vietnam, student sit-ins and smoking "pot" are all highly topical themes; the novel is pure "psychedelic '60's." The style is redolent of Lodge's dry, sardonic humour, so it is very entertaining to read.

Changing Places by David Lodge - Goodreads

David Lodge was recommended to me by a retired English professor; "Be sure to start with 'Changing Places.'" So of course, I did. I usually don't like humorous novels, even ones with serious underlying themes, but "Changing Places" turned out to be an exception.

Changing Places by David Lodge, Paperback - Barnes & Noble

Changing Places (1975) is the first "campus novel" by British novelist David Lodge. The subtitle is "A Tale of Two Campuses", and thus both the title and subtitle are literary allusions to Charles Dickens' A Tale of Two Cities. It is the first text in Lodge's 'Campus Trilogy' of novels, followed by Small World (1984) and Nice Work (1988).

It's a playful novel of two English professors — Morris Zapp from the prestigious West Coast school, Euphoric State (think the University of California at Berkeley), and Philip Swallow from the second-tier British school in a blue-collar city, the University of Rummidge (think of the University of Birmingham) — who ...

CRITICAL ESSAY ON DAVID LODGE'S "CHANGING PLACES"

Changing Places (1975) by David Lodge belongs to the genre of 'campus novels'. Among these works it appears to take its inspiration from Lucky Jim (1954) by Kingsley Amis, for which Lodge wrote an introduction to a recent addition, and perhaps more closely to Eating People is Wrong (1959) and The History Man (1975) by Malcolm Bradbury.

Even so, Lodge's satire eventually migrates to the zone of total improbability, where it devolves into farce. Then, his narrative seems clever but not especially insightful. In CHANGING PLACES, Lodge, the literary man, sometimes winks at his readers. At one point, for example, the spouses are exchanging letters.
