The future of work can mean anything. I've had many conversations and discussions around the idea of "future of work" where people talk past each other, often focused on different fundamental issues.

The Future Of Work Is Five Different Conversations

The Gulf of Tonkin incident (Vietnamese: Sự kiện Vịnh Bắc Bộ), also known as the USS Maddox incident, was an international confrontation that led to the United States engaging more directly in the Vietnam War. It involved either one or two separate confrontations involving North Vietnam and the United States in the waters of the Gulf of Tonkin.

What's Good: Is very straightforward and provides a decent amount of anonymity to safeguard the users' privacy. If both the parties like each other's profiles, you can get chatting and decide everything from there on. It has a one-hour chat constraint in order to curb any annoying and pointless conversations that drag on and on.

This video resonated with me because: I work with an organization that was accused of systemic racism a year ago. It was a hard thing to hear, but that fact is that it was true: we had an all-white board, and predominantly white participants. We didn't mean to, like one of the people said in the video, we weren't a bunch of evil people trying to exclude people of colour.

If anything is certain in leadership—whether you're leading a large company, a mid-sized team, or a family of four—it's that bad things will happen. Ultimately, you will bear the responsibility of sharing the news. Shouldering the burden is the mark of a leader committed to gaining control of an unfavorable situation before it devolves into [...]
